THE 32D INF., U. S. V.

Summary of the Service of a Regiment in the Philippines.

> By A. E. KRETSCHMAR, Co. E, 32d Inf., U. S. V.

BALANGA, LUZON, March 7, 1900. The 32d U. S. V. Inf. arrived on the The 32d U. S. V. Inf. arrived on the Island of Lazon on Nov. 1, 1899, and was sent to the firing line at Angeles, then the extreme northern point reached by our troops. On the morning of Nov. 5 we were lined up at 3 o'clock, and marched through the mud and rain in dense darkness to the outpost on the road to San Pedro Magalang, where we lay in reserve. At daylight the 17th Regulars and a At daying the 17th Regulars and a portion of the 4th Cav. advanced on the insurgent trenches and that day drove them back and captured Magalang. Companies E. K and L of the 32d lay in reserve until 10:30 a. m., when we returned to camp, and after a dinner consisting of one slice of bread and a small slice of bacon we drew one day's travel rations, con-sisting of one can salmon and six hard-tack to each man. After drawing rations were marched out on the Magalang road and proceeded, as escort to a train of bull carts, with provisions, etc., to the 4th Cav. and 17th Inf. at Magalang. Here is where the men of this regiment had their first experience of real war.

From the time we left camp at Angeles at 1:30 p. m. until we arrived in Maga-lang at 11:30 that night the rain poured incessantly, and the mud in places was almost knee deep. When night came the almost knee deep. When night came the darkness was intense, and now the trouble only began. The native bull drivers could not prevent their teams from 19 grand down, and it seemed as if they would always choose the worst spots for their bath ways choose the worst spots for the first spots for the fi ways choose the worst spots for their bath of mud and water, which is almost a necessity to them. Carts were constantly getting stuck in the mud or breaking down under their heavy loads, and each time something of this kind occurred it caused delay and consequently many curses om soldiers who had to help pull carts and goods from Luzon's muddy roads. But

Next morning we began our return march to Angeles, and just on the outskirts of Magalang we could see signs of the battle of the day before. American soldiers were everywhere in the rice fields searching for the bodies of Filipino dead, and here and there we could see them car-rying along a body to bury it with others. One of our boys secured a pair of Ameri-can shoes from the feet of a dead insurrecto who lay near the road.

After returning to Angeles we were moved from our camp in shelter tents to quarters in native shacks. The native houses are simply light structures of bamboo thatched on the sides and roof with tane leaves or grass, and are built about tix feet above the ground to keep their in-mates out of the water in the rainy sea-

The 32d Inf. was now cut up and companies sent to garrison the towns of Angeles, Caloolit, San Fernando, San Rita, San Luis and Mexico. The regiment did garrison duty in these towns, with headin Angeles, until Dec. 2, when the 2d Battalion, under Maj. Spence, com-posed of Cos. E. D. G and M. began a campaign toward the west coast, with Subig Bay as the objective point. On Dec. 3, Co. G, under Capt. Rum-

On Dec. 3, Co. G, under Capt. Rumboldt, had a skirmish with rebels near Florida Blanco, killing one insurgent officer and capturing the town.

The night of Dec. 3 the regimental scouts, under Capt. Hayson, made a forced march to Dinalupijan, in the hope of entering and capturing that place before the arrival of the 3d Inf., which was coming up from the south. They arrived fore the arrival of the 3d Inc., which coming up from the south. They arrived just in time to see the last of the insurgents fleeing to the mountains. The 3d Inf. had occupied the town shortly before the arrival of Capt. Hayson.

The remainder of the 32d arrived in Dinalupian shortly before noon on Dec.

A search of the town produced quantity of arms and ammunition, also stroyed. The battalion, in connection with the 2d Battalion, 3d U. S. Inf., under command of Gen. Grant, next day advanced on and captured the towns of Ara-ni and Aubacay. On Dec. 8 we returned to Dinalupijan, and after resting two days we of the 2d Battalion, 32d Reg., on the 11th of December marched over the mountains to Subig Bay.

Arriving there we found the arsenal in the hands of marines, who had landed the day before from the Oregon and Baltimore. The regimental scouts, Co. C, and a detachment of Co. E were sent to take Subig City, but found the place deserted. Remaining at Subig five days, Cos. E and G returned to the arsenal, and the night of Dec. 16 Gen. Grant, with a few men of E and M, together with a few marines, made an advance up Subig River in boats to capture a steamer the rebels were reto capture a steamer the rebels were re-ported to have hid up the river. Shortly after dark they discovered the enemy's outpost and were fired on. A volley drove the enemy back and the men landed. Another scattering volley drove the enemy from their barracks, and in a short time our men found the steamer concealed under a covering of grass thatching and branches of trees,

On Dec. 18 we returned to Dinalupijan, leaving Subig Arsenal in the hands of the marines and Subig garrisoned by Capt. marines and Subig garrisoned by Capt. It Hayson with the regimental scouts. After two days in Dinalupijan we proceeded to and garrisoned Orani. While in Orani we received news that Co. D. which had been left behind to garrison Dinalupijan, had sent out a party on Dec. 23 to scout in the hills and had been attacked by a superior torce of the enemy, but had escaned capforce of the enemy, but had escaped capture.
Dec. 24 Cos. E and G went to the assistance of Co. D. and all day Christmas searched the mountains for the enemy January 1, 1900, five men of Co. D, who January I, 1300, five men of Co. D, who had been sent out to repair a bridge between Dinalupijan and Hermosa, were attacked, with the result of one wounded and two missing. Thirty men composing a mounted detachment of Co. E were at once sent out to try to overtake the insurgents, but tailed, and spent the night with Co. D, and then early next morning re-Co. The detachment was soon broken up, and small patties were scouring the country in all directions in the hope of finding the other missing soldier or some trace of the enemy. About 10:30 a. m. Serg't Cory with five men ran onto the rear guard of the insurgents in a narrow gulch, and after a few shots he was conveiled to ter a few shots he was compelled to re-treat or run the risk of capture. He at once retreated and communicated with Capt. Seveir, who quickly called the de-tachment together and ordered the ad-

When the enemy scattered it was impossible for us to continue the pursuit, and so we gave it up and returned to Orani.

While we were in quarters at Orani the mounted detachment of Co. E made sev-eral raids on sugar mills where the people were at work at apparently peaceful oc-cupation of sugar grinding, but at several of these mills we discovered arms and ammunition. At one we captured several firearms and a quantity of ammunition, a large amount of lint for binding wounds, matches, clothing, shoes, rice, salt, etc.

Among the captured was a blind insurgent Colonel. On this day the towns of Pilar and Orion were also taken.

Co. E in this town (Balanga) captured Bo rifles, a large quantity of ammunition, left by the colon of the captured street, Washington, D. C.

I. COMRADES! Once More! The Merry Month of May Brings us fond mem'ries of the price less past: Of Squadrons must'ring for the field and fray— The roll of drum, the stirring bugle's blast! 2. Again, we gather under skies of blue. Where lilacs blossom, and where clover

And on these sunken graves we place The Northern lily and the Southern rose! 3.

Once more, we hear the linnet's song affoat-The wren is warbling in the daisied Again we hear the Northern robin's note. And list, entranced, to Southern mock bird's spell!

No pibroch shrilly sounds the call to No blare of trumpet, strident fife, or drum: is heard the musket's deadly rattle— . Nor breathe white lips, "The Foe They Come! They Come!"

No more, the weary march, the dead and dying—
The cruel charge, the furious fusillade: The clanging sabers, the troopers flying— The diapason of the cannonade!

Another conflict has been sternly waged— For Liberty, and the Brotherhood of Man; The Nation's prowess for all time presnged-On far Manila Bay, the battle stormed San Juan! 3.

When drawn the fateful sword against the wrong— God was our Captain in the well-fought fight; While loyal hearts were brave, and arms were strong-God was our Rock, our Refuge, and our Might!
